RUNNING up to New York for a couple of hours, President Hoover made, before the Associated Press at its annual luncheon, his first public address since his inauguration. It was an urgent appeal to the people of the United States for law observance and law enforcement. Life and property, he declared, are relatively more unsafe in this country than in any other civilized land, and he pleaded with the sailors and the citizens generally to aid the government in changing this deplorable condition. Reorganization of the law enforcing machinery, he said, is necessary. To get this he proposed to take his time in selecting "high minded men, impartial in their judgment, skilled in the science of law and our judicial system" to study and report upon the whole of our problems involved in critical law enforcement.

At the outset Mr. Hoover declared that while violations of laws have been increased by the inclusion of crimes in the Eighteenth amendment and by the vast sum that are poured into the hands of the criminal classes by the patronage of illicit liquor by otherwise responsible citizens, yet this is but one segment of our problem, for but a small percentage of these can be attributed to the Eighteenth amendment.

PROSPECTS for reduction of naval armaments were brightened immensely when Ambassador Gilson, American delegate on the League of Nations' preparatory disarmament commission, frankly told before that body the House administration's pro-pacifist. To the astonished representatives of the other nations he declared America was prepared to agree to any House Passes Administration Farm Relief Bill After Killing Amendments.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FARM relief legislation as drafted by the house committee on agriculture and approved by the President won out easily in the lower house of congress after several days of debate. Representative Cannon of Missouri tried to get through an equalization farm amendment, but it was ruled out on a point of order as not germane, and all other attempts to make changes in the Haugen bill were frustrated by the administration forces. Most of the amendments proposed were from Southern Democrats. Two attempts to inject prohibition into the measure were made by Representatives Black and La Guardia of New York, but they were squelched. Senators took up the debate on their own farm bill, which as reported contained the export devaluation feature, Senator McNary of Oregon, chairman of the senate committee on agriculture, told the senate that he had withdrawn his support from the devaluation plan because he regarded it as not subsidy and also because he wished to support a bill which President Hoover is sure to sign.

"I feel there is no doubt whatever," said Senator McNary, "that if a bill carrying the devaluation plan were sent to the White House it would be approved by President Hoover."

Senator McNary conceded that the devaluation plan, which provides an export bounty on farm products through certificates redeemable in the payment of import duties, would be effective in lowering prices.

In a letter to Mr. McNary the President had given at length his reasons for opposing the export devaluation scheme, concluding by saying: "It is my belief that the theoretical benefits would not be reflected to the American farmer; that it would create prosperity; that it contains elements which would bring American agriculture to disaster. The introduction of such a plan would also inevitably confuse and minimize the much more far-reaching plan of farm relief, upon the fundamental principles of which there has been general agreement."

ILLINOIS acts just barely won a victory in the state legislature when the bill calling for a referendum upon repeal of the state prohibition laws was passed by the house without a vote to spare. The measure was handed up to the senate, where the drys believed it would be defeated and the wets were none too optimistic of success.

UNITED STATES Supreme court refused last week to rehear the appeal of Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil magnate, from the three month jail sentence imposed upon him for contempt of the senate during the Teapot Dome oil scandal investigation five years ago. A mandate was issued to the U.S. marshal to remand him to the U.S. penitentiary at Leavenworth.

HILLIS of Alabama broke loose in his cell last week. In March he went to Hamilton, Mo., to deliver a speech under the auspices of the Ku Klux Klan and a small riot resulted.

He tried to induce the senate to adopt a resolution expressing its condemnation of the treatment he received in the Massachusetts town, but this was too much even for that "senatorial committee" that has covered a multitude of queer actions. Goaded by questions Hilles admitted he was paid for his "anti-Catholic speeches" in Princeton and elsewhere. After he had annoyed his colleagues for two days and tried to interrupt the debate on the farm relief bill, the Alabamian was shortly called to time by Senator Borah, who asserted that the Hilles resolution would ally the senate with a campaign against the Roman Catholic people of the United States.

"If the senator really feels," cried Borah, "that that is the time, we ought not to pass a futile resolution, but we ought to appoint a bodyguard from the senate to accompany the senator on these trips. This resolution can have only political effect."

Hilles attacked Watson of Indiana because, he said, the latter had gone back on a promise to support the resolution.

"Why, you're the finest old horse to know what inspired the Indiana senator's change of heart.

"The senator knows I do not belong to the Ku Klux Klan," retorted Watson heatedly.

"I do not," answered Hilles, and added that he intends to visit Indiana and let the people there know "what has gone on here today."

TORNADOES in the Middle Southern states and storms and blizzards in Nebraska and Wyoming cost about fifty lives last week and did vast damage to property. Heavy losses also were sustained from floods in Missouri and Kansas. The blizzard in Wyoming was described as the worst in the history of the state. Transportation was tied up, telegraph and telephone wires were down and thousands of automobiles marooned on highways. The loss of live stock on ranches was severe.

The American commission in the Dominican republic headed by Charles G. Dawes has completed its work and recommends the passage of a budget law and the appointment of a budget director similar to the office in the United States. It advised improvements in the organization of the executive and interior departments and the accounting system, and urged stringent economy. The commission states that the general economic and financial condition of the country is inherently sound. The total indebtedness of the republic, foreign and domestic, including $800,000 owed by 68 municipalities, is estimated at $22,650,000.

HALF-HEARTED efforts were made by the commission on German reparations to find a compromise that all might accept, but the new offer brought from Berlin by Doctor Schacht was not sufficient. The French and Belgians were firm in their determination to make no further reductions. The American experts tried earnestly to save the conference from utter failure, and there was a lingering hope that this might be accomplished if the Germans would again revise their offer.

ONE of the worst of recent aerial disasters occurred at San Diego, Calif., when Lieut. Howard Keeler in an army pursuit plane while stuntng collided with a big passenger ship of the Madrus Air Lines, Inc., bound for Phoenix and both planes crashed to earth from a height of 2,000 feet. Keeler, the two pilots of the passenger plane and its three passengers, two of them women, were killed.

APPOINTMENTS submitted to the Senate by President Hoover included those of Seth W. Richardson of Fargo, N. D., to succeed B. M. Palmer as assistant attorney general; Julius Klein, chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, to be assistant secretary of commerce; Col. Harry L. Gilmor to be chief of the chemical warfare service of the army with the rank of major general, and Col. S. O. Flug to be chief of infantry with the rank of major general.

EDWARD F. CARRY, president of the Pullman company, died in his sleep in his Chicago home at the age of sixty-one years. Besides his long eminence in the business world, Mr. Carry was known for his philanthropies and his scholarship, and during the war he was director of operations for the United States shipping board. He was the recipient of two papal dignitaries, being made a Knight of Malta at the eucharistic congress in Chicago in 1926 and a knight commander of the Order of St. Gregory the Great a few months ago. Prince Henry Hohenzollern, only brother of the ex-Emperor, died of pneumonia at his estate in Schleswig-Holstein. He was a great admiral in the German Imperial navy but took no active part in the war, for he was exceedingly fond of his English relatives and of the czar of Russia, and his wife was Princess Irene of Great Britain. In 1902 Prince Henry toured the United States.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

TOO EASILY WON

I almost flunked a course in English once when I was a student at Harvard—I say almost, for I did finally come to an understanding with my instructor and showed him that in doing the thing he had told me to do I was not doing the thing he wanted me to do. We were studying the novels of the last century and part of the work which I was assigned to do was to give an outline of what I had read and a statement of what I thought about it. Miss Burney and Miss Edgeworth were very sentimental novelists, and their heroines did not make any strong appeal to me. They were too much given to unrestrained emotion. They burst into a flood of tears at the drop of the hat. They were at the most inopportune moment falling in a faint into the arms of some casual passer-by. They were frail, anemic creatures, who took no interest in physical exercise or in physical vigor. I didn't care for them and I said so quite frankly. It was this frankness of mine which nearly got me into academic trouble. I wanted something more virile, more restrained, less lethargic.

There was one quality which the young woman of that day presented which had something to commend it. With all her maudlin sentiment she did not run after men. No matter how deeply her heart might be touched, she was modest; she had to be won; she did not catapult herself into her lover's arms without having had it made quite clear to her that such a movement was very much desired. When Clarence had declared his love for Belinda and had been properly accepted, he was permitted to kiss her hand. A considerable concession, in truth, for those days!

There was no boldness on the part of the young girl one hundred years ago. If her lover did not appropriate or return her affection she might pine, she might grow pale and lose her appetite, but she did so in secret. Publicly she put on a bold front.

HISTORY AND MOTIVE OF THE PERHAM SUNDAY RECREATION BILL

By Its Author, Harold C. Perham
West Paris — Oxford County

After reading the Civic League Record of April 1929 and carefully considering the comments on the Perham Bill, it has occurred to me that a great many members of the Civic League and others might like very much to read the legislative history and know the motives underlying the presentation of such a bill. It seems that a statement from the Author of the bill might fit into the Records very appropriately at this time and possibly eliminate "bit of haze" and misunderstanding.

The Perham Bill—An empty gesture or will the underlying principle of the Perham Bill form the working basis of the next law dealing with Sunday Recreation. Surely, a bill that has attracted the amount of favorable comment that this one has, must have some real value—otherwise it would not have opened up a state wide discussion.

The existing Sunday Law regarding Recreation (the so called Blue Law) is not reasonable nor just, neither does it command the respect of those who read it. Is it not a proper time for every citizen of the state to seriously consider the subject of an Honest worthwhile Sunday Law barring commercial recreation on Sunday, allowing reasonable recreation, and thereby create a law that will be understood, respected and followed by the majority of respectable citizens.

Such is the motive underlying the entire Perham Sunday Recreation Bill. That motive is generally understood by the majority who have studied the bill. It is a simple, just motive and strikes a responsive chord in the heart of the people of the State of Maine.

The History of the Perham Bill is as follows: A copy of the original Perham Bill, as well as the existing Sunday Blue Law, was sent to every member of the legislature and to 650 ministers throughout the State. Many personal letters were sent out to prominent ministers requesting constructive criticism and suggestions. Later on, previous to the Legislative Hearing on the Bill, I notified every minister in the state that such a hearing was to be held. Certainly even the bitterest opponent to the measure could not call such a method anything but fair and above board.

The Hearing was held in the Hall of the House of Representatives. It was well attended and interesting. The bill was dissected in a thorough manner and all faults exposed to public view. Also many other points were touched on which had little bearing on the bill.

I readily agree with both proponents and opponents of the Perham Sunday Recreation Bill that the bill must be re-drafted legally to be acceptable as a Legal Statute. Furthermore, I agree that certain objectionable features may have to be changed quite a bit to suit the public wishes and welfare. This side of the matter was discussed and several changes agreed upon at the time of the hearing at Augusta. The legal affairs committee stood ready to give the bill its proper legal interpretation.

Through Rev. Stanley Manning representing the Executive Board of the Civic League, a resolution was presented to the Legal Affairs Committee asking that a revision committee be appointed to review and revise the bill to thoroughly banish the most objectionable parts of the bill from the legislative session and away from the heat of the legislative hearing and tumult of the final days of the session.

Members of the Legal Affairs Committee voted if such a "Committee Plan" would be agreeable to the plan of the Bill. Such a plan was OK'd immediately on my part as the best method of procedure.

The Legal Affairs Committee drew up the following Bill:

New Draft
EIGHTY-FOURTH LEGISLATIVE
House Document No. 84
H. P. 1749 House of Representatives
April 5, 1929

Reported by a majority of the Committee on Legal Affairs. On motion of Mr. Perham, it is suggested that pending acceptance of either and both copies of new draft, order a printed

STATE OF MAINE

In the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-nine AN ACT to provide for the appointment of a commission to recommend changes in the Sunday Law.

Be it enacted by the People of the State of Maine, as follows:

Section 1. The governor with the advice and consent of the council shall appoint five citizens of the state representing the business and religious interests thereof as a commission to be known as the commission on revision of the Sunday Law. Said commissioners shall serve without pay but shall be reimbursed for their actual expenses incurred while engaged on the duties of said commission. They shall meet as soon as convenient after their appointment at such place as they may our branch Treasure House at 215 Avery Street, Boston, established to meet the growing demand from our customers outside the State.

It's easy to have one. For it isn't as much a question of how much you spend as in choosing the right things and using them correctly

Our merchandise and our decorating service have helped many homes achieve that charming individuality that is so different to the commonplace.

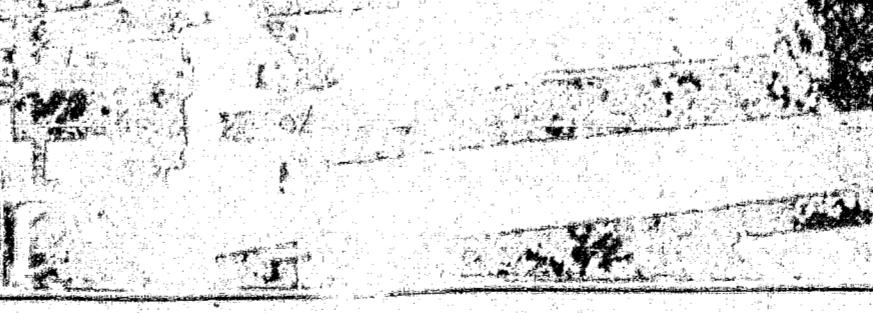

For we have the right merchandise for beautifying walls, floors and windows. And people trained to help you use it to advantage in your home.

In your own case, creating a distinctive home may be simply a question of making your windows more interesting; of achieving an unusual color effect with just the right rug; a matter of a different color scheme to bring out the good points of a "difficult" room; perhaps an extra chair or two; an interesting davenport; a little different table. Or it may be the entire furnishing of that new home.

Whether you wish to spend much or just a little in the re-decorating or refurnishing of your home, our specialization, knowledge and good values enable you to get the very highest possible return for every dollar you spend. If you have in mind any changes in your home it will be worth your while to see how thoroughly we can help you.

THE TOWN DOCTOR

The Doctor of Towns; KNOW THE VALUE OF YOUR
TOURIST TRAFFIC

There has been a great deal written and said about the value of automobile tourism. Not all of it has been correct, since much of it has been more or less guess work and the personal opinions of groups promoting highway routes and trails and publishers of books in which advertising is the main issue. In many cases the data given out is somewhat out of line, but that as it may, the truth is nearer their figures than the realization on the part of most towns of what the actual value really is.

A check of automobile tourist traffic in practically every corner of the country shows an average of three and one half persons per car, the average daily expenditure for not less than ten-day trips to be over $17.00 an average of 250 miles daily, covering seventeen states and towns; and that less than 20% of the traffic are "Tin Can Tour ists". Those who live in camps and travel in what might be termed second class.

Average expenses will show:
Gasoline—allowing 25¢ miles,
15 miles to gallon to 10 $2.75
Oil—average of three pints per day to 50¢ a quart .45 Automobile incidentals, in cluding storage .50
Meals, 1½ lb. 50¢, lunch 50¢, dinner $1.00 7.00
Lodging, average of $1.50 per person 5.25
Incidentals 1.75
Total 617.70

This does not allow for unforeseen expenses, but does include possible tire and mechanical upkeep, tips, a soda or sandwich now and then, and the usual
"Having a good time" to the folks back home.

On the basis, the potential cash value of each tourist car is far more than the value from its home garage, so that to each of the towns through which it passes.

There are, for a town of 2,000 people less or out money with less, that do not care for the average traffic of 2,000 cars per week—100 per day or less for the first 10 days a day. Less than 200 cars each day, or 100 per minute or 3,000 a day, and income starts.

Then, like a good general, he will spend $82,000 for seventeen weeks, or $4,000 per tour.
A business man with an annual business trip to this would be something to talk of.

Every town has a chance of this business. It can cost $1,714 per day but cost fifth that much is something to go after.

The bus business organization knows the amount of traffic that passes through the town the same as any bus operator knows the number of people that pass his store. No bus operator can tell if they are getting their share of traffic to be had if they do not know this.

The total value of tourist or motor trips is great enough to warrant consideration and expenditure of good funds to get it, but there is more than 20% per cent of the out-of-state motor traffic in the market for, or near the home, a new business. Good funds have widened the former's range of marketing of a profit and have numerous opportunities for the employment of labor, but too few towns and cities have capitalized on it.

CHANDLER HILL

Mrs. Annie C. Head of Portland spent the week end with her daughter, Mrs.
Hark.

Robert Kirk and family and Mrs.
Reynolds called at Wesley Bean's Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Hodgson and daughter, Frances, and Miss Myra Thorne were Sunday visitors at Wesley Bean's.

Wesley Bean, Frank, and Alfred Hodgson, Alice Isaac and Ralph Hatton are all working at Bethel Inn.

Mrs. William Kierstead called on Mrs. Vearl Head Monday.

BETHEL AND VICINITY

Mrs. E. C. Park was in Portland
Saturday.

Guy Patterson has finished work at Bethel Inn and has employment at Norway.

Grade room last Thursday. He gave a talk on the history of the government lands of the White Mountains that was much enjoyed.

GOULD ACADEMY NOTES

members of these teams and their coaches, and assured them of the appreciation of the faculty and the student body for their creditable record, the basketball team having won the Oxford County Championship and the debating team having been one of nine secondary schools in the state which won a place in the Bates Intercollegiate Tournament.

Principal Hansen's remarks were followed by a violin solo by Kathryn Herrick. Following this was a vocal solo by Mr. Brasier and a reading by Frances King. A group of boys then gave a skit in honor of the debating team. Each member of the team may have noted some of his individual characteristics in the good-natured
"bit." A pantomime of "Lochlinvar" was then given by the members of the Twentieth Century Club. This number provoked much merriment. The final number on the program was a song "To the Gould Basketters" by a group of girls. A short order of dances followed this program. Music was furnished by Lord's orchestra. Punch and cookies were served. Much credit is due the committee from the Twentieth Century Club for the success of this event.

BASEBALL WEDNESDAY MAY 8TH
The evening home game of the season will be played on the Gould Academy field against South Paris on Wednesday, May 8th, at 3 o'clock. This will be the first Oxford League game played at Bethel and it is hoped that the townspeople will turn out in full force.

The girls' athletic activities for the spring term consist of hiking, baseball and later tennis. About twenty girls are out for baseball. Two teams have been organized, a Freshman-Sophomore and a Junior-Senior. On Monday night, owing to poor weather condition, practice was held in the Gym nasium. The Juniors and Seniors defeated the Freshman and Sophomores, 21-21. The knowledge of stripes and letters has created much interest in Winter and Spring sports.

WILLARD TRACK CAPTAIN
At a meeting of the track letter men, Jay Willard, Captain of Gould Academy was elected to place the 1929 track team. Willard took points in the high jump and high hurdles on the Gould team of 1928, which won the State College Intercollegiate Championship. He is training in these events again this season and gives promise of bettering his last year's record.

The Oxford County Track Meet will be held at Fitchburg on May 25. This will very likely be Gould's first meet of the season, and will be followed by the Bates College Intercollegiate on June 8.

Burnham, Holmes, Johnson and Tate, Lathers of the Oxford County relay championship will attempt to cap this title for Gould again this season. They will be ably supported in the other track and field events by the four other lettermen, Parsons, Willard, Cheshire and Hamlin. The new material is also shaping up well after the first week's practice, and Coach Peasey will undoubtedly select several from this group to round out the first team squad.

PERHAM BILL

Select and shall choose one of their number to be chairman of the commission. Said commission shall consider the advisability of legislation repealing or amending the Sunday law of the state and especially the advisability of legislation permitting amateur games and sports on Sunday. The commission shall hold such hearings
as it may deem necessary.

Sec. 2. Said commission shall on or before January first, nineteen hundred and thirty-one, make written report to the governor and council, which report shall be transmitted to the clerk of the house of representatives upon the organization of the eighty-fifth legislature.

Sec. 3. The sum of two thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act.

It is reasonable to suppose that such a bill would have been drawn had not there been a definite idea in mind of changes in the present Sunday law were advisable and a widespread demand for a reasonable change existed?

This Redraft of the Perham Bill was

The SEA DEVIL

by LOWELL THOMAS

XAYOUTH heran away to sail before the mast, and then became a sailor in the German navy, and was the only naval officer to have risen from the ranks; a man of giant physique, a rough-and-ready character, noted no less for geniality and tender-heartedness than for his foghorn voice and sulphurous language. Before sinking an Allied vessel he brought everyone on board his ship, where he treated them royally.

Rev. W. J. Bell and family have moved into George Holt's house.

Helen Lovrjoey has gone to Hanover, N. H., to work in a hotel for the summer.

Much Sound Wisdom
in Tagalog Proverbs

Following are proverbs of ancient root among the Tagalog people in and around Manila: Nothing but rust destroys iron. Thorns thrust deep when the stop is swift. Though you be far behind, wit may put you ahead. A drunken man may be twisted with impunity; not so he who is awakened from sleep. Noisy waters are always shallow. Never seek fortune; if it really comes it will come of itself. Even water-soaked wood will burn if left long enough in the fire. Repentance never precedes the folly. The savings of today are the comforts of tomorrow. Even a rag put away in the closet, will turn up for good use. The really wise will always shame him who merely pretends to wisdom. A small stool made of sound wood is better than a bishop's chair honey-combed with borers. When a pullet begins laying eggs, chickens may be expected. Criticize yourself before doing so to others. Be the aim never so exalted, the shaft goes no farther than the strength of the archer. He who splits at the sky gets the spray in his face. Pounding wet rice in the mortar only besmirches the workman.

His Beard Too Close
When Tire Blew Out

Probably the first man to devise a fluid to make automobile tires puncture proof was A. L. Dyke of St. Louis, a pioneer in the automobile industry.

The earliest automobiles had single-tube tires, made by bicycle tire manufacturers and glued to the rims of the wheels. They punctured with ease and frequently. When that happened it was necessary to stop, pry off the glued tire, stick rubber bands in the hole and glue them there, put the tire back, glue it to the rim and wait for the glue to dry.

Dyke brought out a sticky substance that could be squirted into a tire in place of air. But an Illinois physician, who wore a beard, was inspecting a tire thus filled when it blew out. He threatened to sue Dyke for the loss of his beard, for it had to be shaved off.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Historic English Ports

The Cinque ports were originally five seaport towns on the coast of Kent and Sussex, England, called in early times "the five most important havens in the kingdom." They were enfranchised by Edward the Confessor, William the Conqueror subsequently granted them the privilege of an almost independent state, under command of a warden, with a court at Dover castle. The five ports were Sandwich, Dover, Hythe, Romney and Hastings. Winchelsea and Rye were added later. Up to the reign of Henry VII their chief function was the supply of the country's naval contingent. Dating from the revolution of 1688 their privileges were gradually abolished, the lord warden's jurisdiction ceasing in 1833.

No Snakes in Green Isle

The Biological survey says that there are no snakes native to Ireland and never have been, so far as there are authentic records. This is due to its geographic position, isolated as it is from the region in which these vermin originated and which they now occupy. A few attempts have been made to introduce harmless species, but as yet its records show none established on the island. This may be due to a lack of proper environment, climate, disease or other abnormal condition. The slow-worm or leg worm, a legless lizard which superficially looks very much like a snake is native to Ireland, and may account for some of the snake records of that country.

Horse Racing Old Sport

Horse racing has been called the "sport of kings" because it has been one of their amusements since the earliest dawn of civilization. The times of the Eighteenth Egyptian dynasty left aapyrus letter telling of his conquest of Mesopotamia and putting himself upon the neopoleum of the racing horse (the Asztu) and being the first to introduce him in Africa. Somewhat later the records of King Solomon buying horses from Egypt and paying as much as $3,000. for some of them. Among the Greeks horse racing was introduced into the Olympic games in the thirty-third Olympiad 1619 B. C.

Earned His "Tip"

This was not unknown 100 years ago, one may see from the following note that appeared in a Pittsburgh paper in 1829:

"Mr. Reale received from Philadelphia on Monday last an entire load of wagons, principally in the shell. The wagon was laden exclusively with cotton. He was 11 days only on the road and he received $100 carriage in compensation of his expedition and his attentive and careful management. Mr. Reale paid the wagoner $2 more than the amount usually received for the amount of loading."—Detroit News.

Health Hint

Lack of sleep is worse than starvation in far as its damaging effects upon the body and mind are concerned. If you keep regular hours there should be no difficulty about sleeping. If there is, find the cause before it undermines you.

NEWRY

Mrs. F. J. French came from Bethel last Saturday to attend the Grange. Mr. French is at work on the road at North Newry.

FLASH THE LEAD DOG

By George Marsh

Subsequently the one who watched through the frosted window, gripped gun in his right hand, while his mitten found the horn handle of his knife. Those men there, who sat their cards, delinquent, would pay to guard Leclerc! Pay for the father he had taken from him. There, where they sat, he could wipe them out, with but two crooks of his finger!

But—was his father there? Presently Gaspard's eyes widened, breathing quickened, as another joined the table—it was not the man he sought. The man he sought was a servant-prisoner. He would not sit with the others. The cabin seemed to have one room only, but there was a loft above the large room, for Gaspard saw the ladder leading to the opening in the floor. He moved to the opposite side of the window where the sheetiron dove not obstruct his view.

Then his eyes were drawn to the top end of the ladder. A concealed stick was thrust from the open trap-door and rested in the round. Then a peeled spruce stick passed the foot of the top round—a short spruce stick, followed by . . . the stump—of—leg!

Breathless, the one flattened against a log wall in the freezing air, struck the body of the one descending the ladder, sliding, lowered hand over hand. Reaching the floor, the figure of the crumpled turned, and the light from a lantern lit the bold features of Pierre Leclerc.

"Fader! . . . Fader!" With a groan Gaspard Leclerc watched the tall figure limp from sight.

Then a wave of grief and rage swept the one outside the window. Stepping back, steel clicked on steel as he threw the rifle to his shoulder and covered the chest of the big man, who sat, ten feet from flinching death. For a space, the steel tube in the mink menaced the unsuspecting "Red" Macbeth, as reason fought with hate, for mastery of the emotions of the half-starved youth. Then, slowly, the gun was lowered and the watcher by the window faded into the darkness.

Shortly Brock was seized by a pair of arms like steel cable. Holding Brock in a bear hug, Gaspard poured out his story.

"He ees dere! He ees dere! I saw 'em!" cried the overjoyed boy. "He ees hurt! He could not travel. So why do we watch 'em?"

In turn, Brock hugged Gaspard, in delight at the news. "Your father! At last! Old partner, put it here! Golly, that's great!"

Then Gaspard stiffened. "You know what dese peop' do to 'em? Dey tak' off lees leg! On hees face ees a leg scar! My fader!" And the chest of the son of Pierre Leclerc rose in a deep sob.

That night, at their hiding place back in the timber, three men sat long in council of war.

CHAPTER XIV

The Vengeance of Gaspard Leclerc

The night following, in the blackness of the scrub behind the cabin of "Red" Macbeth, two men waited beside a dog team. That the dogs might not betray their masters, each was gagged with hide. A half-hour before, a third man had left the two who now waited impatiently for his coming, as they watched the yellow glow of the windows of the cabin. At last, the absent one returned.

"Any trouble, Gaspard?" asked Brock. "You've been away hours."

"Ah-hah! Little troub'! all right now!"

"What was it?"

"I met some one."

"Too bad! What shall we do?"

"We wud not tell—now."

The grim significance of the answer aged Brock's mouth. He understood.

"Marche! Flash!" called Brock to the lead-dog, and they headed up the river shore.

As the galloping dog team swung through the gloom down to the river trail, the flames of the burning schooner turned her masts into fingers of fire thrust upright into the wall of blackness. Around her burning bulk dark shapes ran helplessly to and fro. Then they left her to her fate as the flames, bursting through the windows of the cabin, drew them back to save their provisions and fur.

On went the dog team into the south, bound for the Big Yellow-Leg while the hearts of two boys beat high with pride and happiness. Since the freezing moon when the men of "Red" Macbeth had started to hunt them from the Yellow-Leg, they had traveled a long trail. And now they had won—found the father whom the loyal Gaspard could not put from his heart.

Before turning the first bend, the dog team stopped.

Lighting the river shores, schooner and cabin sent red flames high into the brother of muck. Seizing the hand of his partner, Gaspard said, as his eyes measured the completeness of his revenge on the men who had taken him from his father, "Wal, Brock, I t'ink dat M'sieu Macbeth ces ver' sad dis night dat he try to run over its bilges. The free-traders' boat was afire!

"It'll be lucky not to starve this spring," laughed Brock.

"He not starve; he has been eatin'," added Pierre, "but he lose de fur and stuff in the shack."

When the team stopped, later, to toll the kettle and rest the dogs, Pierre told them his story.

Ambushed one day, the previous March, he had received a shot shattering his ankle, and in the knife fight following the rush by three Indians, had been badly slashed across the face. Brought half-dead, on a sled to Macbeth's quarters, Pierre had later amputated his own foot, and not until autumn had he regained his strength.

His knowledge of fur and ability to handle Indians had been put to valuable use by the free-traders, who had not treated him badly. For this reason, alone, he had not killed them in their sleep, but was waiting for spring, to steal a canoe and follow the coast home. But his boy, instead, had come for him. And the shattered Pierre Leclerc glanced proudly at the boy who stood by the fire with misted eyes.

"Pierre!" cried his mother, waving her white apron, her eyes blinded with tears. "Brockle! Brockle!" yelled in chorus two young brothers and a sister, leaping like rabbits in their excitement and joy.

"Gaspard! Kekway, Gaspard!" shouted the halfbreeds, as the how and stern men stood grinning, waving their paddles at the shore.

Then, as he waved his arms at his hulking son in the bow of the approaching canoe, Angus McCullough gasped in amazement. "Antoine, look! Raised from the dead! Well—I'll be—Hello! Pierre! Pierre Leclerc!" shouted the astounded trader, running out into the water to meet the boy.

Standing in water to his knees, Angus McCullough took his son in his arms, then passed him on to the mother who waited.

"Pierre!" The hands of Frenchman and factor met in a long grip. "Man! I'm glad to see you! We had given you up!"

Then McCullough saw the crippled leg. Pierre Leclerc swung himself from canoe to beach, then standing surrounded by the excited group, said proudly, "As he rested a hand on the shoulder of his son:

"Tra de long snous, dose boys here were hunted by 'Red' Macbeth, and twenty mox. Dey want on Yellow-Leg country for de自分. Old Gaspard and Brock run home? No, in March day light Macbeth—clear to de east."

The silent audience, Indian and white, listened breathlessly as the scarred Frenchman went on: "At de moment' of de Carenoun, dey find schooner and Macbeth's camp. In de night I see de sky red wid fire of burning balsam and shash—and dey tak' me home."

Pierre Leclerc, choking with emotion, then finished:

"There boy here, Brock and Gaspard, do dey cling?"

With a cheer from the crowd, the returning voyagers were led to the post clearing where the red emblem of the great company, blazoned with the white letters H. B. C., was hoisted. Then as Brock and Gaspard stood grinning at the hoar about to be confirmed, from the foot of the flag pole crashed a volley from a dozen rifles.

With an arm about the mother who smiled Leslie-like and a hand on the massive skull of the great gray and white frosty muzzle his sleeve, Brock said to Gaspard, "Do we hunt the Yellow Leg next long snous, partner?"

Gaspard, back ever slumped in his boat, crooked his answer: "De de bird come back in de spring?"

the swollen river.

Where the river split into three channels at the delta islands, a black spot moved slowly upstream close to the main shore. Focusing his small telescope, for a space McCullough handed it to Antoine.

"I can't make it out yet, but there seem to be more than two in the boat."

"Ah-hah! Three-four paddle, I think," answered the halfbreed.

"It's the Peterboro!"

"Ah-hah! Eet ees no bark canoe."

Mrs. McCullough joined the little group of men, women and children on the cliff shore, watching the approaching boat.

"You're sure, Angus—there's no mistake? It's not Indians?"

"It's the boys for sure, mother," and the relieved trader patted the shoulder of the anxious mother.

"Four paddles, deere!" announced Antoine, handing the glass to his chief.

"There're no Indians wintering up the coast—who in thunder have they picked up?"

For an hour the canoe bucked the deluge of the current, hugging the shore for the easier going there. They were less than a mile distant when some one shouted: "There are the dogs!"

On the beach, three huskies kept abreast of the canoe.

"There's Brock in the bow!" cried Angus McCullough as the craft approached the post.

"I'd know his shoulders anywhere; and Gaspard's steering wheel."

Closer came the wanderers, and the little group of excited people on the high shore ran to the beach below to welcome those who had returned from the ruthless maw of the Yellow-Leg wilderness.

"Brock!" called his mother, waving her white apron, her eyes blinded with tears.

"Brockle! Brockle!" yelled in chorus two young brothers and a sister, leaping like rabbits in their excitement and joy.

"Gaspard! Kekway, Gaspard!" shouted the halfbreeds, as the how and stern men stood grinning, waving their paddles at the shore.

Then, as he waved his arms at his hulking son in the bow of the approaching canoe, Angus McCullough gasped in amazement. "Antoine, look! Raised from the dead! Well—I'll be—Hello! Pierre! Pierre Leclerc!" shouted the astounded trader, running out into the water to meet the boy.

10:45 Morning Worship. Subject of sermon by pastor, "The Uncommon Commoner". In Jesus' time, as in ours, society was divided into classes.

Material possessions and intellectual attainments furnished them, as now, for many, at least a sense of superiority and independence. To such, the Gospel, the Church and Religion seems to be of little importance. Surveying their possessions they say with the man of the Parable, "What lack I yet?"

There were those, however, who realized, that although poor and lacking in those things that were regarded as the essentials of greatness, they could find comfort, consolation and spiritual riches in the preaching and program of Jesus Christ, therefore, "The Common People heard Him Gladly."

Has he a message for the common people today? Who are the common people, and are they ready to listen?

MRS. MERRILL and CHILD
"I had cause to use your Elixir and was greatly relieved. At times I was affected with a sort of numb feeling which often developed into slight sickness. After using Dr. True's Elixir I got almost immediate relief—it has done me good for my family. My own mother died years ago. I have used it for my two children, too." Mrs. Maude I. Merrill, Circuit St. Melrose (Mass.). Family size $1.20; other sizes 6c; 4c. Successfully used for over 27 years.
